EPS SECURITY ADDS TERRITORY SALES CONSULTANTS

KALAMAZOO, Mich., June 23, 2010—Engineered Protection Systems, Inc. (EPS Security), West Michigan’s leading commercial and residential security company, has expanded its technical sales team with the addition of Ed Blanton and Alex Livieratos as territory sales consultants.

Blanton and Livieratos will work from the Kalamazoo office of EPS Security, and will focus primarily on servicing commercial accounts in the Southwest Michigan-area. Both sales consultants report to Jeff Bos, Southwest Michigan territory sales manager.

Blanton is an MBA candidate at Western Michigan University and worked as an insurance broker in Napa, Calif. for two years prior to joining EPS Security. He also spent time in the National Football League (NFL) as a football player, most recently with the New York Jets in 2006.

Livieratos has more than a decade of experience in the security industry, including seven years as proprietor of a digital security company based in Chicago. He brings with him an extensive array of experience in security and surveillance technology.

“EPS continues to grow, particularly in commercial and enterprise system sales,” said Bos. “Ed and Alex have significantly different backgrounds, but both bring a unique skill set to the table and we’re thrilled to have them join the EPS team.”

EPS recently moved its Kalamazoo offices into a larger space at Western Michigan University’s Business, Technology and Research Park to allow room for future growth and to align with similar technology-based companies. The company expects to double its local staff during the next five years.
